

New Media Production and Design is a technology-centred program that promotes critical thinking to develop engaging content for web-based user experiences and provides comprehensive training in the tools and techniques used for web design and development. Graduates can pursue job opportunities in specialty production houses, agencies, private businesses, education or government. Some also freelance or open their own small business. This program meets the eligibility criteria for the Post-

Graduation Work Permit program for international students as long as the student is enrolled in the on-campus delivery mode or completes more than 50 percent of the courses on campus (for the blended option). International students attending all classes online will NOT be eligible for a Post-Graduate Work Permit. International students are responsible for maintaining their eligibility throughout their studies. Classes for this program adhere to the following year start and end dates based on the semester.
